Immersion Racing features all the cars from the past and present that have participated in the IMSA GTS, IMSA GTO, IMSA GTU, IMSA GTU, PWC GT, and IMSA GT classes. It also features classic cars such as the Ferrari 512BB and Lancia Stratos. It features a career mode with 12 different real-life races from around the world. It was the first in the series to support higher resolutions, up to 2048×1536. Immersion Racing 3, released in 2004, was the first in the series to receive official support on the PlayStation 2. It has 6 different sports (Super Stock, Super Touring, Pro Touring, Porsche GT3, European GT3, and GT4) with both manual and automated modes. There are ten levels of difficulty to choose from, from easy, to hard, expert, pro, and pro expert. The game also offers an online mode called the Accelerator where players can race against the computer using a mouse. The Accelerator mode adds the power to the acceleration to give the player the feeling of driving a sports car. Immersion Racing 4 features six car classes: Super Touring, Super Touring V, GT, GT3, German Touring and Dutch Touring. The game uses the GPS, and drivers are able to track their own performances, as well as driving aids, such as the Launch Control feature, where the player can accelerate the car when entering a corner. The game includes the ability to record every session. It also features a day/night cycle in the weekends. Immersion Racing 5, released in 2006, features two major new classes: the European Touring Car and the American GT-T. The game features a new three-dimensional cockpit view, as well as higher-resolution textures, more detailed liveries and a higher framerate, all of which make the cars look better than in previous versions. Immersion Racing 5 has the most realistic physics in the series. Immersion Racing 5 includes the ability to simulate tire wear, including traction control, electronic braking, and other vehicle dynamics.
